JOHNNY MOORE AND WIFE FACE POSSESSION; COMPLETE 'PLANT' IS CONFISCATED IN PERRY-TWP

Local Man and Wife Out On Bond After Raids Led by State Agents
FIGHT IS AVERTED
'Real Whiskey' Is Taken From George Reeves

Two persons will be given hearings on charges of possessing intoxicating liquor and a third has been bound over to the grand jury for pleading guilty to manufacturing and possessing whiskey after raids conducted in this city and Perry-twp Saturday afternoon by Sheriff Charles H. Radcliff, Deputies Custer, Armstrong and Russell, Police Officer William McCrady and two state prohibition department men.

John Moore, and his wife, Nonda Moore, this city, were freed from custody Saturday evening when they each furnished $500 bond for appearing before Common Pleas Judge Joseph W. Adkins, from whose bench the search warrant was issued. They were charged with possession.

George Reeves of Perry-twp, three miles west of Atlanta, was freed under $1,000 bond from Judge Adkins' court after being bound over to the grand jury for manufacturing and possessing alleged whiskey.

BREAK DOWN DOOR
Moore and his wife were arrested shortly after 3 p. m. Saturday in their home at Huston and Scioto-sts after officers broke down a door to enter the place. One of the state men preceding the raiding party, went through the confectionery on the lower floor and climbed the stairs to find the door locked. He promptly broke through it and was confronted by Moore. It is charged that Moore swung at the state man, but when the latter picked up a chair to do battle the fight came to an end.

Other officers hurried to the bedroom where they claim Mrs. Moore was pouring alleged whiskey into the bath-tub. They obtained two quarts of whiskey and a large amount of beer, which being held at the county jail as evidence Moore and his wife were freed after furnishing bond or hearing at 2 p. m. Tuesday. They are represented by Dick McKins.

It was indicated by officers the coores would plead guilty. Officers claim there were two colored men drinking beer when they entered the Moore residence. It is possible a charge of resisting officer will be charged.

"REAL WHISKEY"
Fifty gallons of what is claimed to be real whiskey, a 50-gallon still and other implements used in a manufacture of whiskey, were confiscated at the residence of George Reeves.

The officers, all mentioned, before, with the exception of Officer McCrady and Deputy Armstrong, entered the Reeves residence with their search warrant and were helped upstairs by Reeves where he showed them his complete apparatus, shining like nickel. The still was torn down and tossed out a window where Armstrong was killed with a truck to haul it to this city. The value of the destroyed still is estimated at over $100 while the whiskey, had it been sold, would have returned Reeves approximately $500. The whiskey, all placed in charred kegs, was marked on what date it had been kegged. One keg of 20-gallon capacity was marked October 1930. Reeves called this private supply and asked Sheriff Radcliff if he would not be permitted to keep it. It is now residing in the county jail, locked in a cell.

Reeves told the officers when they placed him under arrest that they weren't arresting him for making bad whiskey for his own product always had a reputable name. The still was reputedly well cleaned.

A small quantity of home brew, 5 pounds of sugar, a quantity of meal and other things were taken by the raiding party. The raid was made at Reeves' at about 5 p. m.

BLAINE DITCH CASE SETTLED FOR PLAINTIFF

Ruling Made by Appeals Court in Litigation of Seven year

DARBY-TP EFFECTED

All Contentions of Plaintiff Upheld
The case of Kathryn Lucas, plaintiff in error, against Ernest D. Blaine and others, defendants in error, generally known as the Blaine Ditch Case, was decided by the Court of Appeals of the Fifth District, sitting by designation instead of our own Fourth District Judges, in favor of the petitioners for the ditch, Ernest D. Blaine and other land owners, residing in Darby-twp, according to a lengthy opinion filed last Saturday with the clerk of courts, Ferd Pickens.

UPHOLD BLAINE ET AL

Judge Lemert wrote the opinion and decision, which is concurred in by his associates, Judges Sherrick and Montgomery. The contentions of Mr. Blaine and his associates are sustained in every particular by this decision, finding that the ditch improvement is necessary, that the cost will be less than the benefits conferred on the property and lands drained, that the route selected is the best and that the assessments which have been made against the land owners were made according to the benefits to be derived by them. Mrs. Lucas was allowed $1000 for compensation and damages, and if she wishes to have a jury determine and fix this amount for her, that issue may now be tried in the Common Pleas Court. The Court of Appeals assesses all costs in the error proceeding and appeal against Mrs. Lucas.

IN COURT 7 YEARS

This has been a long drawn out case and was begun in the early part of 1924 before the County Commissioners, then heard on Appeal before Judge Curtain in the Common Pleas, then carried to the Court of Appeals where the Common Pleas Court was reversed and sent back for re-trial. It was again heard in the Common Pleas Court, Judge Whitcraft of Legan presiding, who affirmed the proceedings before the County Commissioners, and now the Court of Appeals in this last decision affirms Judge Whitcraft.

The last hearing was had before the Court of Appeals at Mt. Gilead, O., on March 31. Abernethy & Simkins and C. A. Weldon, were attorneys for Mrs. Lucas, and Charles H. May and Irvin F. Snyder were attorneys for Mr. Blaine and others.

FIRE DESTROYS HOUSE, GOODS

Williamsport Dwelling Burned To Ground Early Monday; Cause Unknown

The 6 room 2 story dwelling in Williamsport, owned by R. T. Liston, north of this city, and occupied by Joseph Whiteside, was completely destroyed by fire of undetermined origin at 1 a. m. Monday.

The entire structure and all its contents, partly covered by insurance, are completely destroyed.

Mrs. William Neff, a neighbor, was the first person to observe the flames when she was awakened by the glare of the flames through her bedroom window. She awakened Mr. Neff who called Ansel Whiteside, father of the occupant of the building. He called the Williamsport fire company. When the unit arrived the flames had gained such headway that the mechanical pumper had little effect on the burning structure.

The pumper strung a line of hose to the creek bridge but the department was again hampered by the shortage of hose. The fire however was confined to the burning building.

The New Holland fire unit was called but did not put its pumper to use, putting some of its hose in the creek.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Taken tow by the U. S. S. Wyoming after being disabled in mid-Atlantic by engine trouble, the Polar submarine Nautilus, commanded by Sir Hubert Wilkins, was to proceed today to Cogh (Queensstown), Ireland, a thousand miles away. After properly shackling the tow line at dawn, the Nautilus was to resume its journey in tow of the battleship. Messages received here from the scene stated that the strong wind had abated somewhat and that the heavy sea had subsided.

That the tow-line had been taken aboard the submarine was revealed in a message intercepted by the naval communications station here at midnight. All aboard the submarine are safe, the message stated. The exact position of the submarine was latitude 46.12 and longitude 31.40.

The blaze broke out about six o'clock this morning. Miners formed a bucket brigade in a futile effort to save the structure. Clothing and mining equipment which were stored in the workhouse were totally lost in the fire. Damages were estimated at approximately $5,000.

PROBE IS STARTED
Mine officials started an immediate investigation of the blaze to determine if strike outbreaks that have embroiled this region for the last week were responsible.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., June 15.—The olive branch of peace was to be borne into the strife-ridden coal fields of southeastern Ohio today, where more than 1,500 miners were striking.

With a hope of ending labor troubles that have stirred this region into a cauldron of unrest and lawlessness, operators of the Clarkson Coal Co., stated they would re-open the Provident mine today and guarantee workers protection from picketing strikers.

The Provident mine was one of several that closed down last week under the pressure of labor disorders.

HOLIDAY CROWD DESTROYED AS BOAT CAPSIZES IN TURBULENT BAY; 478 REPORTED DROWNED

Passengers on French Boat Rush to Leaside as Storm Comes Up, Terrific Weight Plus Huge Wave, Turning River Boat Completely Over; Only Eight Reported Rescued; Stories Are Told.

SAINT NAZAIRE, France, June 15.—Horror-stricken France today was bending every effort towards saving further possible survivors of the excursion steamer Saint Philbert. The river boat, with 478 men, women and children pleasure-seekers aboard, went down in the turbulent waters of the Bay of Biscay last night.

The crew of the pilot boat Saint George saw the disaster while cruising near the island of Noirmoutier from which the Saint Philbert was returning to Nantes. They reported that the excursionists, obviously seasick, had crowded to the railing of the Saint Philbert.

A sudden blast of wind capsized the steamer, which belonged to the Messageries De-Luquet. Only eight survivors have been reported so far. Four bodies, three of them those of unidentified women, had been recovered at the last report.

Practically all the excursionists were members of the Workmen's Cooperative Society of the department of the Loire Inferieure. 100 TURN BACK
More than a hundred others might have perished had they not turned back at Pornic when they saw from the inky blueness of the water that a storm was brewing.

65 RECOVERED

PARIS, June 15.—The French line announced today the recovery of 65 bodies from the water near Pornic where the steamer St. Philbert sank with a loss of almost 500 lives.

Of the 65 victims found 62 were women and three were men it was reported.

Most of the passengers came from Nantes or further inland, Nut Pornic, a fisherman's town on the Brittany coast, knows the treachery of the Bay of Biscay. The Saint Philbert, a vessel of 190 tons, was returning when the bay suddenly turned into a raging cauldron. A watcher in the light-house at the Pointe de Saint Gildas witnessed the disaster and signaled to Saint Nazaire for aid.

At first, he said, the captain of the Saint Philbert flung out a distress flag, but almost immediately afterward a huge wave swamped the vessel. For a moment the bow hovered above the water and then disappeared beneath the white caps.

Tugs immediately put out from Pornic, Saint Nazaire and other towns. After hours of searching one of them came back with the bodies of three women and one survivor. Another tug brought in seven more survivors.

Thousands of Britons, who are well-acquainted to tragedies of the sea stood on the piers of Saint Nazaire with heads bowed in prayer.

The port of Saint Nazaire is familiar to hundreds of thousands of Americans who were there as soldiers during the World war. It was the principal port of entry for Americans.

Among the eight survivors of the wreck were one Austrian, one Norwegian and six Frenchmen. The Austrian, named Fritz Silanek, was the first survivor to tell what happened. He said that most of the passengers had crowded to the lee-side of the vessel to avoid the Continued on Page Six.

RENDEZVOUS OFF

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, June 15.—Abandonment of the plan for a rendezvous at the North Pole between the Graf Zeppelin and the submarine Nautilus was announced today by Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Zeppelin.

The mishap to the motors of Sir Hubert Wilkins' submarine which overtook the vessel in mid-Atlantic yesterday has made it impossible for the two vessels to keep their appointment in the Arctic region, Dr. Eckener said.

An independent flight to the pole by the Graf Zeppelin, he said still may be made.

WEALTHY FARMER'S DAUGHTER IS HELD

GALLIPOLIS, O., June 15.—A 17-year-old daughter of a wealthy Gallia-co farmer occupied a cell in the county jail here today while authorities investigated the death of Owen Hall, 32, son of a former Gallipolis city manager, who was shot and killed yesterday.

Hazel Dillon, daughter of Greer Dillon, who owns a large estate near Crown City, near where Hall was shot, was arrested and held for investigation. Bethel Moore, 24, who, officials said, was with Hall and Miss Dillon when the shooting occurred, also was held.

LICENSE LAW

An opinion, recently rendered by West Virginia's Attorney-General, Howard B. Lee, holds that the new peddler's License Law of that state is unconstitutional.

Although, the Attorney-General's opinion does not render it inoperative, it is regarded as unlikely that any attempt will be made to enforce it in view of what many regard as being a plain case of unconstitutionality.

The Ohio Department of Agriculture has taken an active part in the fight against enforcement of this law.

The purpose of the law, as amended this year, was to eliminate truck growers of Ohio and other states as competitors of West Virginia farmers.

The law levies a tax of $50.00 on peddlers who travel without a horse or vehicle; $150.00 on those who travel "with a horse, with or without a wagon or other vehicle" and $200.00 "if he travels with two or more horses, with or without a vehicle, or if he travels with a motor vehicle."

As many Ohio growers, have for years, trucked their produce to West Virginia cities, they would now, under this law, be forced to purchase a $200.00 peddlers' license.

CROP SURVEY

E. A. Flemming, Chief, Bureau of Markets, of the Ohio Department of Agriculture, recently completed a survey of Southern Ohio crops.

His report, to Director Guthery, show many southern Ohio farmers are taking an active interest in growing of fruit and vegetables.

Cabbage is now being cut in many counties. Outlook for potato crop is extra good. Production of tomatoes will run close to last year. A good crop of both early and late apples is predicted.

This year, many southern Ohio growers will take advantage of the market inspection service offered by the State Bureau of Markets.

In summing up his report, Mr. Flemming states that the prospect of good crops is brighter, this year, than for several years past.

FISH AND GAME LAWS

The fish and game laws of Ohio, corrected to April 30, 1931 are now ready for distribution. Copy of these laws can be had by addressing Director I. S. Guthery, Division of Conservation, Ohio Department of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

One of Ohio's popular game farms is located at Urbana. Under the supervision of the Ohio Department of Agriculture, the Division of Conservation maintains this farm for the propagation of Ohio wild life.

Here, ten thousand young pheasants are now being fed and cared for. Later on, these pheasants will be distributed throughout Ohio.

Mr. Tom Nash, Superintendent of the farm, advises Director Guthery that an additional ten thousand of these birds will be liberated within the next several weeks.

Many visitors have stopped at the farm the past several weeks. It is not often that Ohio folks have an opportunity to see this number of pheasants at one time.

HONEY USEFUL

Honey is a year-round friend of the motorist. In the winter it provides a good antifreeze solution for the radiator, and in the summer it helps to keep the radiator cool, since it has a higher boiling point than water.

This rather unusual use of honey is not uncommon in the West according to C. A. Reese, bee specialist of the Ohio Department of Agriculture. In mountainous countries where motors naturally overheat, and in dry regions where water along the road side is scarce, honey is particularly useful in radiators. One man is known to have used the same solution in his radiator for seven or eight years.

While there are advantages in having honey in the radiator water, there are likewise disadvantages. Honey will pass through openings too small for water. This means that gaskets and radiator hose connections on a car must be very tight if honey is to be used. Otherwise the honey might leak into the cylinder and cause serious damage.

WHY RAISE WHEAT IN OHIO
"This year, Ohio will be short on potatoes and long on wheat," so says Director I. S. Guthery of the Ohio Department of Agriculture.

The average yearly production of potatoes, in Ohio, is eleven million bushels. Consumption is eighteen million. Last year, production dropped to nine million. This year, estimates predict a crop of thirteen million. Supply will be five million bushels less than demand.

This season, as in the past, thousands of carloads of potatoes will be shipped into this state. Some of these cars will come a thousand miles.

It is hard, for Buckeye farmers, to understand how a grower in Maine can ship his potatoes halfway across the Nation and complete with Ohio producers. Cost of production is as great in Maine as here with Ohio producers. Cost of long haul freight charge to pay. Still he is able to find a ready market.

The solution of this problem is simple. The farmer in Maine is smart. He knows Ohio folks like quality. He uses care in grading and packing. To find a market for his crop, it must excel that of his competitor.

He knows that many Ohio farmers use ship-shod grading methods. He profits by this. The produce he ships has been carefully graded and packed. It will bring enough higher price in Ohio markets to offset the cost of shipping. When his potatoes arrive they are in ready demand. Usually, they are sold before arrival.

While the Ohio farmer has trucked his product a dozen miles or so, and looked in vain for a ready sale, a man, a thousand miles away shipped in and carried home, a top-notch price from a ready buyer. The farmer could have had this bargain if he had used the same care in the grading and packing of his potato.

Each year, millions of dollars that should go into the pockets of the farmer of Ohio are carried away by the fruit and vegetable growers of other states.

Many visitors have stopped at the farm the past several weeks. It is not often that Ohio folks have an opportunity to see this number of pheasants at one time.

At this time of the year good tools are essential to successful farming. Mr. Harry Hill, farm implement dealer, located on E. Franklin-st., asks visitors to come to his store and look at the line of farming tools he offers.

Chief among the products offered are International Trucks, Farmall Tractors, Cream Separators, Harness and a full line of numerous other farm implements.

The International Truck has been carefully engineered to meet the present-day needs. It is built for continual hauling service under severe and difficult conditions.

The rugged engine which powers this truck is of the same design and sturdy construction that have proved so satisfactory in International heavy duty trucks for the past two years. Mr. Hill heartily recommends the use of this truck for hauling service in the city and country.

McCormick-Deering tractors including the Farmall offers a size and type for every farm. All these tractors are four-cylinder triple-power units, supplying power where needed, on the drawbar, belt and power take-off.

He only asks one try!

"BUY FURNACES NOW" --HASWELL

At this time of the year the public is not apt to think of buying furnaces for next year, however, now is the best time to consider the purchase of this type of "whole house" heater, according to J. C. Haswell, who has been in the furnace building business during the past 45 years.

The Haswell All-steel Furnace is very well-known in Circleville and Pickaway-co. to the hundreds of users who have been satisfied with their purchases.

The furnace is built with expert hands and is made for soft and hard coal, coke and wood, or any other burning material. The heater is encased in a galvanized iron jacket which insures that none of the heat will escape by way of the chimney, but will pass through the various heating pipes in the house.

The heater has also plenty of air space between the lower casing ring and the sub-radiator which gives the air a chance to circulate around the shell. The air to fan the fire is admitted through the hot blast door, comes in contact with the apron pouch feed and then passes to the underside of the grate. Prices of the various numbers and sizes of the furnaces sold by Mr. Haswell range from $127 to $202.

Mr. Haswell's shop also makes steel or iron smoke stacks and engages in all kinds of heavy steel and iron work, making galvanized steel tanks and other such items.

Mr. Haswell invites visitors to his place of business located in the rear of the Wallace Bakery.

He is glad at all times to accommodate the public, by calling at homes and giving prices on various projects.

EDWARD C. EBERT HAS SODA GRILL

Warm weather always calls for good confections and soft drinks, and the Edward C. Ebert Soda Grill located on S. Court-st. certainly can serve the above in all styles, with the right kind of service.

Mr. Ebert has a delightful soda parlor which is cool at all times and a delightful and pleasant spot to entertain the friends who may happen in at your home, when you are least expecting them. All kinds of sodas and other ice cream specials and soft drinks are offered here, while various kinds of sandwiches and other 'munchies' of food are offered also.

While he has been engaged in business Mr. Ebert has attempted to please his customers by offering what they wish in the correct style, and in this way has won many friends and patrons to his business.

He handles Furnas Quality Ice Cream, which has already made a name for itself throughout the state, in handy quart packages for 35¢. This is the 'FAST FROZEN' cream recently put on the market by the Furnas Co., and has been very well accepted by the public.

Mr. Ebert also has a full line of candies, cigars and cigarettes. Picture developing in short time is also offered here.

When you long for a cold drink or ice cream during these warm days, go to Ebert's, where the right kind of 'products wished' is offered.

HEAVY MACHINERY MOVERS WARNED

A timely warning is being sent out by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in its campaign to lessen the number of accidents at grade crossings resulting from the moving of heavy machinery and farm implements across railroad tracks.

A letter recently advises drivers of heavy farm or road machinery, before attempting to cross railroad tracks to notify the supervisor, track foreman, any regular watchman, telegraph operator, or agent of the time and the place where the crossing is to be made, and a special watchman will be provided free of any charge to assist in safe movement.

The railroad company will provide a special watchman for this purpose at any time of the day or night if given sufficient notice.

Farmers at many points on the division have already taken advantage of this offer to get across the tracks with threshing outfits, tractors, and other heavy farm machinery, and are well pleased with the splendid co-operation received by the railroad employees.

It is hard, for Buckeye farmers, to understand how a grower in Maine can ship his potatoes halfway across the Nation and complete with Ohio producers. Cost of production is as great in Maine as in Ohio. Cost of long haul freight charge to pay. Still he is able to find a ready market.

The solution of this problem is simple. The farmer in Maine is smart. He knows Ohio folks like quality. He uses care in grading and packing. To find a market for his crop, it must excel that of his competitor.

He knows that many Ohio farmers use slip-shod grading methods. He profited by this. The produce he ships has been carefully graded and packed. It will bring enough higher price in Ohio markets to offset the cost of shipping. When his potatoes arrive they are in ready demand. Usually, they are sold before arrival.

While the Ohio farmer has trucked his product a dozen miles or so, and looked in vain for a ready sale, a man, a thousand miles away slipped in and carried home, a top-notch price from a ready buyer. The farmer could have had this bargain if he had used the same care in the grading and packing of his potato.

Each year, millions of dollars that should go into the pockets of the farmer of Ohio are carried away by the fruit and vegetable growers of other states.

DO they harass you by day and keep you awake at night?

SPECIAL CHICKEN DINNERS OFFERED

"The People's Restaurant," conducted by Russell and Jones at 207 W. Main-st, is fast growing in popularity through the selective home-cooked food which is offered here.

This restaurant operated by two ladies has only been in operation for a short time and has built up a fine trade, through the fine dinners offered at such reasonable prices.

Russell and Jones are probably best known for their chicken dinners which they serve on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday for the mere price of 35 cents. This includes a delicious dinner with trimmings and everything.

This is an unusual special and has been taken advantage of by most of down-town Circleville folks who are looking for good dinners.

This restaurant in a letter to the Business Review Editor recently stated that advertising in the business review section had probably brought more than 50 per cent of the business to the restaurant.

Besides the chicken dinners offered on the above dates mentioned, Russell and Jones serve good lunches and dinners every day, offering various meals every day in the week.

Mrs. Russell and Mrs. Jones will most obligingly accept a visit from the public, and will attempt to show that their meals served and offered are of the best.

All they ask is one visit and they believe they will win you.

NOTICE!

The Business Review Editor is anxious to hear from advertisers in this section about their specials or unusual products, which they will offer during the summer months.

Material for write-ups or copy is gladly accepted by The Herald for the business review section.
Send copy to The Herald office as soon as possible.

HARRY HILL IS IMPLEMENT DEALER

At this time of the year good tools are essential to successful farming. Mr. Harry Hill, farm implement dealer, located on E. Franklin-st, asks visitors to come to his store and look at the line of farming tools he offers.

Chief among the products offered are International Trucks, Farmall Tractors, Cream Separators, Harness and a full line of numerous other farm implements.

The International Truck has been carefully engineered to meet the present-day needs. It is built for continual hauling service under severe and difficult conditions. The rugged engine which powers this truck is of the same design and sturdy construction that have proved so satisfactory in International heavy duty trucks for the past two years. Mr. Hill heartily recommends the use of this truck for hauling service in the city and country.

McCormick-Deering tractors including the Farmall offers a size and type for every farm. All these tractors are four-cylinder triple-power units, supplying power where needed, on the drawbar, belt and power take-off.

These and other products are offered at Mr. Hill's store, which he will be very glad to demonstrate if you call at his store on Franklin-st or call 24 and he will gladly send an agent to see you, say him a visit.

CRYDER INTEREST SOLD TO SMITH

During the past week the partnership of Smith & Cryder, operating the Sandwich Shop and Tea Room on the Lancaster-pk, was dissolved, and the Cryder interest was purchased by P. D. Smith, former sole owner.

Mr. Smith operates a fine delicatessen shop, serving the best of home-cooked food. Every day new customers are seen at this sandwich shop, partaking of the delicious food.

Together with the tea room, Mr. Smith also operates a Sinclair Service station, offering Sinclair products, including gasolines and oils.

Mr. Smith is an energetic business man and is at all times attempting to bring new ideas before the public.

Reservations for bridge lunches or dinners can be made, and this tea room can accommodate you in the best style. Mr. Smith thinks and deems it a pleasure to serve the public at all times.

He asks that during the warm summer months when good lunches are in demand that you call at his Sandwich Shop and Tea Room and give him a chance to please you.

He only asks one try!

"BUY FURNACES NOW"---HASWELL

At this time of the year the public is not apt to think of buying furnaces for next year, however, now is the best time to consider the purchase of this type of "whole house" heater, according to J. C. Haswell, who has been in the furnace building business during the past 45 years.

The Haswell All-steel Furnace is very well-known in Circleville and Pickaway-co to the hundreds of users who have been satisfied with their purchases.

The furnace is built with expert hands and is made for soft and hard coal, coke and wood, or any other burning material. The heater is encased in a galvanized iron jacket which insures that none of the heat will escape by way of the chimney, but will pass through the various heating pipes in the house.

The heater has also plenty of air space between the lower casing ring and the sub-radiator which gives the air a chance to circulate around the shell. The air to fan the fire is admitted through the hot blast door, comes in contact with the apron pouch feed and then passes to the underside of the grate. Prices of the various numbers and sizes of the furnaces sold by Mr. Haswell range from $127 to $202.

Mr. Haswell's shop also makes steel or iron smoke stacks and engages in all kinds of heavy steel and iron work, making galvanized steel tanks and other such items.

Mr. Haswell invites visitors to his place of business located in the rear of the Wallace Bakery.

He is glad at all times to accommodate the public, by calling at homes and giving prices on various projects.

EDWARD C. EBERT HAS SODA GRILL

Warm weather always calls for good confections and soft drinks, and the Edward C. Ebert Soda Grill located on S. Court-st certainly can serve the above in all styles, with the right kind of service.

Mr. Ebert has a delightful soda parlor which is cool at all times and a delightful and pleasant spot to entertain the friends who may happen in at your home, when you are least expecting them. All kinds of sodas and other ice cream specials and soft drinks are offered here, while various kinds of sandwiches and other "munchies" of food are offered also.

While he has been engaged in business Mr. Ebert has attempted to please his customers by offering what they wish in the correct style, and in this way has won many friends and patrons to his business.

He handles Furnas Quality Ice Cream, which has already made a name for itself throughout the state, in handy quart packages for 35c. This is the "FAST FROZEN" cream recently put on the market by the Furnas Co., and has been very well accepted by the public.

Mr. Ebert also has a full line of candies, cigars and cigarettes. Picture developing in short time is also offered here.

When you long for a cold drink or ice cream during these warm days, go to Ebert's, where the right kind of "products wished" is offered.

HEAVY MACHINERY MOVERS WARNED

A timely warning is being sent out by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in its campaign to lessen the number of accidents at grade crossings resulting from the moving of heavy machinery and farm implements across railroad tracks.

A letter recently advises drivers of heavy farm or road machinery, before attempting to cross railroad tracks to notify the supervisor, track foreman, any regular watchman, telegraph operator, or agent of the time and the place where the crossing is to be made, and a special watchman will be provided free of any charge to assist in safe movement.

The railroad company will provide a special watchman for this purpose at any time of the day or night if given sufficient notice. Farmers at many points on the division have already taken advantage of this offer to get across the tracks with threshing outfits, tractors, and other heavy farm machinery, and are well pleased with the splendid co-operation received by the railroad employees.

MILDEW ON ROSES

flour of sulphur which can be purchased at your drug store and can be dusted onto the bushes by hand or with one of the small blowers such as is furnished with Black Flag fly powder.

Green fly and other rose insect pests are best disposed of by an occasional spraying with "Black Leaf Fourty" which is obtainable also at your druggists.

Roses appreciate feeding and if you have tea or monthly roses and want the best flowers, get some fresh cow manure and put it in water, stir it up into a liquid that can be applied through an ordinary sprinkling can and water your roses with this once a week and you will soon note the improvement in the foliage and the flowers.

Roses like clay and if your soil is not doing well, see that you have deep clay around their roots. If you are planting roses and your soil is not clay; dig a hole two feet deep and fill it with clay and plant your roses in that best results.

Bone meal is good for many shrubs and your roses will appreciate one application a year if you have grape vines, try a bone meal on them too.

Jimmy Armour After Western Open Crown Now Held By Gene Sarazen.

DAYTON, O., June 15.—With Jimmy Armour definitely entered, the starting list for the Western Open today contained almost all the important names in golfdom's who's who.

Few celebrities will be missing when the first threesome tees off at a beautiful but tricky Miami Valley here Thursday morning.

Only Melhorn's entry blank is needed to complete the list of recent Western Open champions.

Armour's declaration on his arrival in New York, fresh from his British Open triumph, that he would come here, assured a healthy scrap between himself and Champion Gene Sarazen, who took the title from Armour last year.

Besides that pair the other entries who have worn the Western Open crown are stylish Walter Hagen, four times a winner; Chick Evans, the veteran amateur who is the only simon-pure ever able to cop the title, and Abe Espinosa, who succeeded Hagen as champion in 1928.

George Von Elm, Carley Lacey, Eddie and Olin Dutra and Ed Huley are among the not-yet-champions who will go gunning for the prize this week.

Armour, who has held every important golf championship for which he is eligible will be the big drawing card of the tourney.

Already holder of the national professional championship and the Canadian open title in addition to the British open belt which he won at Carnoustie, the acquisition of the Western Open supremacy would make him more than ever "the Bobby Jones of the pros."

High scoring on the course this summer probably means that Miami Valley will prove a difficult task for participants this week.

A tough, thick rough will doubtless cost many a stroke when the meet gets under way.

With the greens all finely trimmed, extraordinarily cautious putting will be necessary.

Club members at the Miami Valley course have practically deserted the course and the clubhouse, leaving both to the visitors, who were expected to start arriving here today.

SENATORS CUT MACKS MARGIN

Walter Johnson's Team Only Three Full Games Back of First.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Riding on the crest of a nine-game winning streak, the Washington Senators are gradually cutting down the lead of Connie Mack's Athletics, pace setters in the American league race. By winning all of their even starts during the past week while the A's were capturing five out of seven, the Nats gained two full games on the champions and were only three games away from leading this morning.

"Puddin'" Oliver, who was on the mound for the first fray, granted only three singles and one free trip, while he collected seven strike outs.

Carl Purcell, second game hurler was also effective when he allowed but six hits which were well scattered. Purcell allowed no charity trips and had four strike outs to his credit.

Mt. Sterling displayed excellent sportmanship during the entire two frays even though they were on the short end of the score.

Dick Robinson and Merle Thompson were responsible for a circuit clout each. Robinson slammed out his when the bases were loaded, while Thompson garnered his with one man on the paths.

Cost Of Death Of Indian Girl To State High

COLUMBUS, O., June 15.—Another distinction was in sight today for Mrs. Julia Maude Lowther, the Jefferson, O., girl who this week was sentenced to the electric chair.

State Welfare Director John McSweeney discovered that the fact she is to be the first woman to be electrocuted in Ohio is not her only claim to fame.

"Mrs. Lowther's execution, if carried out," he said "probably will be the most expensive electrocution in the history of the state."

The improvised "Death Row" the state will have to prepare for her because it lacks accommodations for women at the penitentiary will cost the treasury of Ohio approximately $2,000, he declared.

A part of that sum, Director McSweeney said, will have to be spent for special services provided by woman attendants.

After an inspection of possible places for housing Mrs. Lowther until she is electrocuted for the murder of Mrs. Clara Smith, wife of Tibby Smith, who is now awaiting execution, Director McSweeney decided that the city prison here is the best available.

Selfishness has its uses. If it didn't exist divorce lawyers would starve.

RENEW VIOLENCE IN SPAIN, REPORT

LONDON, June 15.—Renewed violence in Spain between communists and laborers was reported today in an exchange telegraph dispatch from Barcelona.

In that city many persons were wounded when rival organizations of communists and socialists fought a pitched battle in the workers' quarter.

In the province of Asturias, communists dynamited a workmen's train.

The trouble in Barcelona broke out when socialists decided to end a strike and return to work in the lumberyards. Communists bitterly opposed this decision.

ATLANTIC LINERS REDUCE VOYAGES

LONDON, June 15.—Due to a forty per cent decrease in trans-Atlantic passenger traffic this year, shipping companies have eliminated at least forty voyages from their schedules for next year it was announced here today.

Big liners have been arriving at Southampton with half the number of passengers carried last year. Although tourist third class traffic has held up well, the expensive first class decks have been half empty.

Practically all the big lines, including the Cunard, French, United States and White Star lines, announced cuts.

King of Sports

WHEN a sport is so entrancing that it calls man away from his sleep for the greater part of the night, hypnotizes him into making a long automobile drive, keeps him going throughout the chill, sunless early morning hours in mist-covered, wind-blown swamps, lakes and woods, and then sends him back to town, tired, sleepy, wet, bedraggled, and yet able to do a day's work despite these sacrifices and labors, there must be something to that sport that hasn't been fully fathomed.

Don't the little of king of American sports belong to fishing rather than to the gentle art of angling, and their patronage of the art has made them brothers to a large fraternity. While former President Coolidge was a fair-weather vacation fisherman, his successor seems to be a fiend for the sport. Izaak Walton would have gloried in a convert who discarded a luxurious yacht for rod and reel and prefers to spend his week-ends along a mountain stream rather than in the white house gardens and drawing room.

Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover have brought new prestige to the gentle art of angling, and their patronage of the art has made them brothers to a large fraternity. While former President Coolidge was a fair-weather vacation fisherman, his successor seems to be a fiend for the sport. Izaak Walton would have gloried in a convert who discarded a luxurious yacht for rod and reel and prefers to spend his week-ends along a mountain stream rather than in the white house gardens and drawing room.

City People Sleep, Too

THE big city may be wild and in the imagination of those who live far from it, a place where the inhabitants spend their nights carousing and their mornings sleeping off hangovers. But in the records of companies providing electricity which keeps bright lights burning, these cities are just great big villages.

Charts of these companies showing the hourly consumption of electricity ought to prove more than almost any document having bearing on the subject, "How doth the great white way?"

Well, what do they prove? They prove that the big city, taking one day with another, begins to go to bed around nine or ten o'clock at night. They prove that by twelve o'clock most of the town is asleep, and that by three or four o'clock hardly anybody is awake.

They prove that city folks instead of snoozing through the day are up by seven o'clock and at work by nine. They prove that from twelve to one o'clock is the lunch hour on Wall Street as well as on Main Street.

In short the light charts prove what any urbanite already knows. And they might provide material for study for those who are not city broke and who believe all they hear about the sinfulness of the big city.

Impatience

IMPATIENCE is the commonest of afflictions and it is no less an affliction for being so common. It assumes many forms most of them petty and unreasonable. Sometimes it seems people show impatience merely for the sake of striking an attitude.

Men and women have been seen to dash across tracks and then turn to watch the onrushing train pass and disappear down the converging rails. And passengers on that train will crowd the aisles before the cars come to a stop.

Where will one find a more ill-tempered crowd than an assemblage waiting for a late train or delayed trolley? And yet many in that crowd know that while they are waiting they are using up minutes they would have had to waste at their destination.

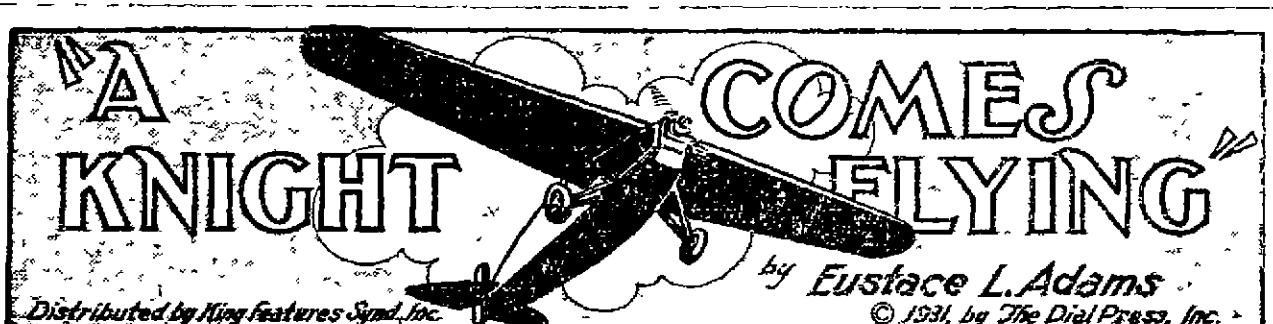

Human very human impatience again shows its seething face at the elevator door. If an elevator is not available instantly, the average person subjects the button to a frenzy of pushing and begins to fume and fume. Even elevator has gone through the experience.

Rendezvous

THE home has ceased to be a mere port of last resort and becomes a charmed rendezvous. And the radio is responsible. If one may eat dinner at home and at the same time hear the melodious strains of a symphony orchestra, if one may roll up the parlor rug and dance to the jazz jigsongs of a metropolitan dance orchestra, if one may sit in smoking jacket and slippers and not miss the evening church service there is no place like home.

The home is indebted to these new god-dus twins, Neurotome and Heterodyne, for bringing back the wandering flock. The player-

THE RAT-GUARD

Following the crash of his plane in Joan Marbury's Florida orange groves, young and wealthy Dave Orday is content with the peaceful life on the plantation that is a contrast to his former pleasure-seeking existence. Adventure awaits him here, however. Mueller, brutal owner of the adjoining groves, is trying to force his attentions upon Joan. He robs Dave and burns his plane because Dave refuses his demands for damage to Mueller's property in landing. Joan's cousin, Sally, who lives on the plantation, is in love with Dave, but he is more attracted by the reserved Joan. When Dave's erstwhile fiancée, Barbara Holworthy, and his friends, Gerry Flemming and Talbot Henderson, visit him, he is aware of the antagonism among the girls. Gerry recognizes Mueller as "Smash" Caszoui, a bootlegger. The boys leave to steal Mueller's plane to replace Dave's. They discover Mueller's liquor store. Fearing trouble Dave has Talbot return to warn the girls to stay at home. They disregard the warning.

CHAPTER XXII

IT'S about the flashlight, Talbot," he said, coming to a halt. "This place is dark as a cow's stomach."

"Why—er—I forgot to bring it," said Talbot, lamely.

"Aren't you the little help?" sighed Dave. "I've got a good mind to take you both home and come back here alone."

"Come here, Talbot," said Gerry, ominously, "and kiss papa."

Talbot promptly moved out of reach. Gerry's stealthy footsteps could be heard pursuing him through the blackness.

"Listen, you birds!" whispered Dave, tensely. "There's something going on outside."

The three stood silent. From the open door behind them came the sound of a popping engine, the grinding of gears. Dave hurried through the gloom, entering one of the great rooms which faced the house nearest the landing field.

A Stone's Throw

"Come here, fellows," he called guardedly. "It's Mueller's truck coming through the road in the jungle."

Talbot, eluding Gerry's clinging arms, hurried to the window, followed by the other, who circled wholeheartedly as they crashed into the door jamb. They stood at the empty frame of the French window, watching the headlight beams of the motor car flash on the road as it came within a few feet of the house.

Two men suddenly appeared in front of the lights and disappeared into the darkness of the patio. The truck came to a stop, its beam lights shining on the road, and a man came out of the back of the car, carrying a flashlight.

Two more black figures dashed across the strip of light and followed the others into the house.

"From where I stand," Talbot muttered unhappily, "this strip of Cayah looks crowded. Turn on those street lights and it'll seem as if boom times have struck it again. I'll bet there'll be a real estate office open here in the morning. But I won't be here to see it. Those babies over there have been eating red meat. We'd better go."

"Count 'em for me, Talbot," requested Gerry. "If there aren't any more than I think there are over there, I can lick 'em all."

"I've got a good mind to throw you out of the window and let you try it," whispered Dave, savagely.

"A twentieth century Daniel in the lions' den," suggested Talbot. "If Daniel had had a couple of swallows of Mueller's liquor," retorted Gerry, thickly, "he'd have wrung the lions' necks and gotten himself elected mayor of Rome. Or was it Rome? Maybe it was Athens. I never could remember my . . ."

Ready to Strike

"Shut up, you garrulous snout!" snapped Dave. Then, turning to Talbot, "Tell you what we'll do. We'll all beat it back to Gerry's car. You fellows drive on to Joan's and drop me off half-way. I'll duck through the groves, cut around behind Mueller's men and have another look at the hangar. Chances are that it is still unguarded. They all seem to be milling around here."

"I'm going to smack Mueller," announced Gerry, stubbornly.

"Let me finish," urged Dave, impatiently. "I'll try to get the plane according to our plan. You and Gerry had better stay right on at Joan's until I drive back from St. Pete. They won't be safe there with Mueller on the loose."

"I was talking to Sally about coming back to St. Pete with us," confided Talbot. "She wants to come. Perhaps she can persuade her cousin."

"Fast worker, Talbot," hiccupped Gerry. "You don't think I see things, but I do. I could see you getting all limp every time little Buck Eyes looked at you."

Dave stared sharply at Talbot. "She's a wonderful girl," said Talbot defensively. "She makes the girls in our crowd seem like dumb dolls."

Gerry threw an uncertain leg over the window sill.

"I'm going to lick Mueller," he declared. "I can lick anybody who lives around here."

Dave grabbed his shoulder and jerked him back into the room.

"We'll have to get out of here, Talbot," he said, "before this idiot ruins everything. Come on, Gerry. When I come back from St. Pete, we'll take on the whole gang for a battle royal."

Gerry's mind slightly mollified, he made no reply, but heard Dave's words, trying to focus his eyes upon the road scene at the foot of house.

More men were now milling about in the back of the hangar. The door was open and a few minutes ago, there had been a dark, dangerous flashlights, coming with hunting voices.

"Come on," whispered Dave. "They'll be coming over this way in a few minutes."

Holding tightly to Gerry's arm, he turned away from the window. The room was dark to eyes accustomed to the bright light outside. The three groped their way across the wide floor, listening to the hollow echoes as they bounced back from one blank wall to another.

And then, in a swift, unreasoning impulse, he kissed her full on the lips. The tired body which had, an instant ago, been fighting desperately, went suddenly limp in his arms. As though he and Joan were joined in an infinity of time. He had forgotten the others, had forgotten the searching men, had forgotten everything but the unbelievable fragrance of those lovely lips pressed so hard against his own.

There was a terrific thud as a heavy body struck the floor. A small shriek split the air.

"Miss Joan, Miss Joan! Where is you? De's a man got me?"

Don't Walk the Floor Everytime Baby Cries

There's Usually a Basic Cause for the Infant's Disturbed Slumber—Find It and Correct It, Advises Authority, and Don't Coddle and Spoil Him

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ONE of the favorite stunts of the cartoonist is to picture the wailing child, keeping his parents busy at night. He shows the mother or father pacing the floor and meekly praying for the crying to stop.

Such pictures speak the truth, even though they are considerably exaggerated. At any rate they teach a lesson which may be applied today.

A child should not be taken out of the crib merely because it cries. If the baby sleeps lightly, wakens often, there is a reason for it. The thing to do is to find the cause and correct it.

When the baby is uncomfortable at night, it may be because of over-excitement during the day. It may have played too vigorously or too roughly, late in the day.

Overexcitement should be avoided at all times. Regardless of the age of the child, overstimulation is a bad thing. It is certainly advisable that after four o'clock all play be quiet and restful, rather than exciting.

Dr. Copeland

When the baby is restless every night and not sleeping well, a cool bath or a warm one, depending upon the weather, will promote sleep. During the summer months, a tub bath just before bedtime will give great relief.

As a rule, most young mothers are overanxious. They hate to leave the child alone. Please remember that if the baby has been properly adjusted, the windows and lights taken care of, the child may be and should be left alone.

Permit the child to go to sleep by itself. Never go back merely because it cries. Once you do so, the child will expect it of you and will cry again.

King of Sports

When a sport is so entrancing that it calls man away from his sleep for the greater part of the night, hypnotizes him into making a long automobile drive, keeps him going throughout the chill, sunless early morning hours in mist-covered, wind-blown swamps, lakes and woods, and then sends him back to town, tired, sleepy, wet, bedraggled, and yet able to do a day's work despite these sacrifices and labors, there must be something to that sport that hasn't been fully fathomed.

Don't the title of king of American sports belong to fishing rather than to golf? The art has a monad game is, to be sure more organized and spectacular, but wouldn't a national census show more flies cast than flies caught in a season? While rabid, the baseball fan does not compare with the true disciple of Izaak Walton in his mania for his beloved recreation.

Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover have brought new prestige to the gentle art of angling, and their patronage of the art has made them brothers to a large fraternity. While former President Coolidge was a fair-weather vacation fisherman, his successor seems to be a fiend for the sport. Izaak Walton would have gloried in a convert who discarded a luxurious yacht for rod and reel and prefers to spend his week-ends along a mountain stream rather than in the white house gardens and drawing room.

City People Sleep, Too

The big city may be wild and in the imagination of those who live far from it, a place where the inhabitants spend their nights carousing and their mornings sleeping off hangovers. But in the records of companies providing electricity which keeps bright lights burning, these cities are just great big villages.

Charts of these companies showing the hourly consumption of electricity ought to prove more than almost any document having bearing on the subject, "How do the great white way?"

Well, what do they prove? They prove that the big city, taking one day with another, begins to go to bed around nine or ten o'clock at night. They prove that by twelve o'clock most of the town is asleep, and that by three or four o'clock hardly anybody is awake. They prove that city folks instead of snoozing through the day are up by seven o'clock and at work by nine. They prove that from twelve to one o'clock is the lunch hour on Wall Street as well as on Main Street.

In short, the light charts prove what any urbanite already knows. And they might provide material for study for those who are not city broke and who believe all they hear about the sinfulness of the big city.

Impatience

IMPATIENCE is the commonest of afflictions, and it is no less an affliction for being so common. It assumes many forms, most of them petty and unreasonable. Sometimes it seems people show impatience merely for the sake of striking an attitude.

Men and women have been seen to dash across tracks and then turn to watch the onrushing train pass and disappear down the converging rails. And passengers on that train will crowd the aisles before the cars come to a stop.

Where will one find a more ill-tempered crowd than an assemblage waiting for a late train or delayed trolley? And yet many in that crowd know that while they are waiting they are using up minutes they would have had to waste at their destination.

Human, very human, impatience again shows its scolding face at the elevator door. If an elevator is not available instantly, the average person subjects the button to a frenzy of pushing and begins to fuss and fume. Every elevator has gone through the experience.

Rendezvous

THE home has ceased to be a mere port of last resort and becomes a cherished rendezvous. And the radio is responsible. If one may eat dinner at home and at the same time hear the melodious strains of a symphony orchestra, if one may roll up the parlor rug and dance to the jazz janglings of a metropolitan dance orchestra, if one may sit in smoking

THE RAT GUARD

Following the crash of his plane in Joan Marbury's Florida orange groves, young and wealthy Dave Ordway is content with the peaceful life on the plantation that is a contrast to his former pleasure-seeking existence. Adventure awaits him here, however. Mueller, brutal owner of the adjoining groves, is trying to force his attentions upon Joan. He robs Dave and burns his plane because Dave refuses his demands for damage to Mueller's property in landing. Joan's cousin, Sally, who lives on the plantation, is in love with Dave, but he is more attracted by the reserved Joan. When Dave's erstwhile fiancée, Barbara Holworthy, and his friends, Gerry Flemming and Talbot Henderson, visit him, he is aware of the antagonism among the girls. Gerry recognizes Mueller as "Snatch Cazzoni, a boot-legger. The boys leave to steal Mueller's plane to replace Dave's. They discover Mueller's liquor store. Fearing trouble Dave has Talbot return to warn the girls to stay at home. They disregard the warning.

CHAPTER XXII
ETVS have the flashlight, Talbot," he said, coming to a halt. "This place is dark as a cow's stomach."

"Why—er—I forgot to bring it," said Talbot, lamely. "Aren't you the like help?" sighed Dave. "I've got a good mind to take you both home and come back here alone." "Come here, Talbot," said Gerry, ominously, "and kiss papa." Talbot promptly moved out of reach. Gerry's stealthy footsteps could be heard pursuing him through the darkness. "Listen, you birds!" whispered Dave, tensely. "There's something going on outside." The three stood silent. From the open door behind them came the sound of a popping engine, the grinding of gears. Dave blundered through the gloom, entering one of the great rooms which faced the house nearest the landing field.

A Stone's Throw

"Come here, fellows," he called guardedly. "It's Mueller's truck coming, through the road in the jungle."

Talbot, eluding Gerry's groping arms, hurried to the window, followed by the other, who cursed wholeheartedly as he crashed into the door jamb. They stood at the empty frame of the French window, watching the headlights circle the liquor-filled dwelling that the boys had so recently examined. Two men suddenly appeared in front of the lights and disappeared into the darkness of the patio. The truck came to a stop, its twin cones of incandescence pointed directly at the breach in the walled enclosure. Two more black figures dashed across the strip of light and followed the others into the house.

"From where I stand," Talbot muttered unhappily, "this strip of Cathay looks crowded. Turn on those street lights and it'll seem as if boom times have struck it again. I'll bet there'll be a real estate office open here in the morning. But I won't be here to see it. Those babies over there chestra, if one may sit in smoking jacket and slippers and not miss the evening church service, there is no place like home.

The home is indebted to these new gaudy twins, Neutrodyne and Hetrodyne, for bringing back the wandering flock. The player-have been eating red meat. We'd better go." "Count 'em for me, Talbot," requested Gerry. "If there aren't any more than I think there are over there, I can lick 'em all." "I've got a good mind to throw you out of the window and let you try it," whispered Dave, savagely. "A twentieth century Daniel in the lions' den," sniggered Talbot. "If Daniel had had a couple of swallows of Mueller's liquor," retorted Gerry, thickly, "he'd have won the lions' necks and gotten himself elected mayor of Rome. Or was it Rome? Maybe it was Athens. I never could remember my . . ."

Ready to Strike

"Shut up, you garrulous souse!" snapped Dave. Then, turning to Talbot, "Tell you what we'll do. We'll all beat it back to Gerry's car. You fellows drive on to Joan's and drop me off half-way. I'll duck through the groves, cut around behind Mueller's men and have another look at the hangar. Chances are that it is still unguarded. They all seem to be milling around here."

"I'm going to smack Mueller," announced Gerry, stubbornly. "Let me finish," urged Dave, impatiently. "I'll try to get the plane according to our plan. You and Gerry had better stay right on at Joan's until I drive back from St. Pete. They won't be safe there with Mueller on the loose."

"I was talking to Sally about coming back to St. Pete with us," confided Talbot. "She wants to come. Perhaps she can persuade her cousin."

"Fast worker, Talbot," hiccupped Gerry. "You don't think I see things, but I do. I could see you setting all limp every time little Black Eyes looked at you." Dave stared sharply at Talbot. "She's a wonderful girl," said Talbot, defensively. "She makes the girls in our crowd seem like dumb Doras."

Gerry threw an uncertain leg over the window sill. "I'm going to lick Mueller," he declared. "I can lick his whole gang. I can lick anybody who lives around here."

Dave grabbed his shoulder and jerked him back into the room. "We'll have to get out of here, Talbot," he said, "before this idiot ruins everything. Come on, Gerry. When I come back from St. Pete we'll take on the whole gang for a battle royal."

Gerry seemed slightly mollified. He made no reply, but leaned against the wall, trying to focus his eyes upon the black figures, echoing with shouting voices. "Come on," whispered Dave. "They'll be coming over this way in a few minutes."

Holding tightly to Gerry's arm, he turned away from the window. The room was doubly dark to eyes accustomed to the bright headlights outside. The three groped their way across the wide floor, listening to the hollow echoes which bounced back from one blank wall to another.

"Give me your shotgun, Talbot," said Dave. "You'll be dropping it, or firing it by accident, or something."

"What shotgun?" asked Talbot. "The one we took away from that guard!" retorted Dave. "How many have you?" Talbot's heavy body could be heard moving away in the darkness. "Er—I must have left it in the first house," he said apologetically. "If it takes me all evening," declared Gerry, heatedly, "I'm going to find that blimp and loop him all over the place."

"Go away, Gerry!" came Talbot's agitated voice. "Go away or I'll tell Dave what's in your hip pocket."

"Sssh!" warned Dave. "I think I hear something. Be quiet!" The others became still and followed Dave through the room toward the patch of utter blackness that was the door. Even Gerry moved quietly, his befogged mind intent upon the prospect of imminent action.

As they filed through the arched doorway to the hall, Dave came to an abrupt halt. To his alert ears came the soft tread of footsteps, the hiss of suddenly withdrawn breath. Gerry lurched into him, then became tense as he, too, heard the alien sounds. Talbot crept up on amazingly silent feet and stopped beside his companions, his restraining hand on Gerry's tense arm.

Stepped for Action

Gerry shook off the hands of the two men who held him. He moved forward, his muscles quivering like those of a race horse at the barrier. Dave stepped ahead through the darkness, straining his eyes and ears to try to locate the enemy before leaping into battle.

He heard the well-oiled click of a safety catch. There, a dozen feet away, a close-knit group of black shadows were advancing toward the three men. Dave leaped, arms outstretched for instant action. His hurtling body shouldered Gerry aside. Then he crashed into the nearest of the black figures, a hot, searing flame streaked past his cheek. The report of the gun almost deafened him. His arms closed about a lithe, slender body, which struggled like a wild thing. Through the biting odor of gunpowder and the sweetish smell of gun oil there was a faint fragrance of jasmine. He staggered, trying to recover his balance and so to hold that slender body from crashing to the floor.

"Joan!" he gasped. And then, in a swift, unreasoning impulse, he kissed her full on the lips. The rigid body which had, an instant ago, been fighting desperately, went suddenly limp in his arms. The blackness surrounded them as though he and Joan were alone in an infinity of space. He had forgotten the others, had forgotten the searching men, had forgotten the fragrance of those lovely lips crushed so hard against his own.

There was a terrific thud as a heavy body struck the floor. A shrill shriek split the air. "Miss Joan, Miss Joan! Where is you? Dey's a man got me!"

Don't Walk the Floor
Everytime Baby Cries

There's Usually a Basic Cause for the Infant's Disturbed Slumber—Find It and Correct It, Advises Authority, and Don't Coddle and Spoil Him

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ONE of the favorite stunts of the cartoonist is to picture the wailing child, keeping his parents busy at night. He shows the mother or father pacing the floor and madly praying for the crying to stop.

Such pictures speak the truth, even though they are considerably exaggerated. At any rate they teach a lesson which may be applied today.

A child should not be taken out of the crib merely because it cries. If the baby sleeps lightly, wakens often, there is a reason for it. The thing to do is to find the cause and correct it.

When the baby is uncomfortable at night, it may be because of over-excitement during the day. It may have played too vigorously or too roughly, late in the day.

Overexcitement should be avoided at all times. Regardless of the age of the child, overstimulation is a bad thing. It is certainly advisable that after four o'clock all play be quiet and restful, rather than exciting.

Frequently, the child will be disturbed at night because he is wet and cold, or too warm. Something may be annoying him, as a misplaced pin or wrinkled bed clothing. Make a careful examination before leaving the child for the night. Make sure it is not lying in a cramped position.

If the child is restless, it may be because the diaper is too tight. Make the necessary adjustments, but do not take the child from the crib. Don't provide material for the proverbial cartoon illustrating the parent as he walks the floor.

The child's bedroom, just as the adult's room, should have plenty of fresh air. The room should be quiet. No light should shine on the baby's eyes. The child should be well covered and protected from draughts.

When the baby is restless every night and not sleeping well, a cool bath or a warm one, depending upon the weather, will promote sleep. During the summer months, a tub bath just before bedtime will give great relief.

As a rule, most young mothers are overanxious. They hate to leave the child alone. Please remember that if the baby has been properly fed and diapered, if the bed is properly adjusted, if the windows and lights taken care of, the child may be and should be left alone.

Permit the child to go to sleep by itself. Never go back merely because it cries. Once you do so, the child will expect it of you and will cry again.

In Irene Dunne, Radio Pictures has made the most sensational discovery of the talkie age. Not only is her beauty and stage presence unsurpassable, but her acting is nothing less than inspired.

His outlook on life is closely akin to that of the newspaper and magazine pen-and-ink character which he portrays in Paramount's talkie offering, "Skippy," at the Cliftona theatre. Norman Taurag, who directed the picture, is dependable authority for some of young Cooper's moods.

Ever since the six-year-old youth was selected for the title role, Taurag has spent as much time as possible with the boy to study his mannerisms and swing them toward those of Skippy.

A tow-headed lad who bursts into everything in a devil-may-care spirit, Jackie, like Skippy, is eternally in hot-water, Taurag says.

At heart Jackie Copper is typically the "Skippy" that the world knows through Percy Crosby's famous cartoon narrative.

STRIKE BOARD WHERE IT EXTENDS OVER EDGE OF TABLE

Take a small board or a shingle about two feet long, eight inches wide, and one-fourth inch thick, lay it on a table with a traction over half extending over the edge, so that the slightest touch will cause it to fall to the floor, and spread a few pages of a newspaper over the half of the board that remains on the table. With a hardwood stick or iron poker strike the portion of the board that extends over the edge of the table and you will find the blow will not make the board fall nor raise the newspaper. This is explained by the compression of air beneath the newspaper, which makes the paper adhere to the table and in doing so prevents the board from rising.

UNDER THE EVENING ELAMP

The Measure of a Man

The standard of manhood's not strength alone, It isn't a measure of sinew or bone;

Your brain and your brawn aren't worth 30 cents If you don't go through with the things you commence.

Reward for the plodder, the bull— Success is far more than a matter of wit; It can't be achieved without courage or grit.

—Herbert Kaufman.

Pride in One's Work

Happy ought to be the man, woman, or boy or girl who takes up their daily tasks, whatever they may be, and perform their duties in such a way that when the day is over they have a pride in what they have accomplished.

To Make pride in one's achievements makes work a pleasure instead of drudgery. And every day that advancement is made comes a fresh thrill.

There has never been permanent success in any profession or vocation without careful, conscientious, preparation and unflagging diligence. It is just as necessary to have a secure foundation in building a business, profession, or vocation as it is for the construction of great buildings, railroad beds, bridges, etc.

Inferior work, slipshod methods, indifference, trying to get by with as little effort as possible, usually spells disaster in the long run, and it is the long run—the finish—that counts.

The writer has in mind a young man who has won success and the respect and confidence of his employers and the admiration and dog-jawed fellow, Who never grows blue and who never turns yellow.

Who learns how to suffer without yelp or bellow, And smile all the while as he faces his trial—

Success is far more than a matter of wit; It can't be achieved without courage or grit.

—Herbert Kaufman.

A Man Without a City

Breathes there a man with soul so scared Who never for his home town cheered, When time and place presented? If such there breathe, he must remain

The hermit of his own domain. Shame be his lot if he demands The fruitage of his neighbor's hands.

Let such as he, if such there be, Like Arabs, fold their tents and flee, And thus make room for worth-while men Who praise their city now and then.

—H. Ross Ake.

"Killing Two Birds"

We often speak of "killing two birds with one stone." From a game of tennis we get both health and fun. From certain books we draw immediate enjoyment and valuable information as well. Last year a fallen tree sprawled across the lawn of my next-door neighbor. He seldom used his fireplace, had no ax, and did not like to chop wood. He was glad to have me cut it up for my fireplace. My work was for his advantage, my advantage, and also for my fun. As a salesman you may sell something to people which they very much desire. They are glad to pay you for making it available to them. The sale profits both them and you. An artist paints for the love of his art, but pays his bills by receipts from his painting. The scientist who discovers a means of combating cancer will make a tremendous contribution to human welfare; he will, in all probability, also achieve considerable personal satisfaction and recognition. It is often possible to serve two or more purposes at the same time. —Forward.

The young man referred to has succeeded because of his ambition, close application and mastering every detail of his trade. As he has progressed an increased interest has come to him and as a result his greatest pride is seeing each day how well he can do his work.

It has been said that genius is intensified common sense, supplement with trained intelligence, clear thinking, concentration, and hard work. The urge to excel, the desire to do one's best in whatever profession or vocation they take up as their life work, is what brings justifiable pride.

CAMPERS PLAY

PRANK ON J. D.

A number of out of doors enthusiasts including J. D. Hummel, R. L. Brehmer, C. O. Leist, William Tegardun and S. G. Rader enjoyed a day at Rader's camp near Picketon last week. It is only natural to assume that a party such as his would enjoy the trip, with good home cooked food—for they are all good cooks—and the visit wouldn't be complete with out someone being caught off guard, with some prank being played on them. All of these men know how to handle a gun, but all of them don't know the difference between a ground hog and a plaster Farns door stop, so John Hummel, being an expert marksman, sat in wait for the ground hog and when this door stop showed his head in the hole, bang, and the prize was won. But the laugh was on John. He'll be his own guide the next time.

Any member of the family of Don Myers, 214 S. Court-st., is invited to be a guest of The Herald to the Grand Theatre. Call at this office for ticket.

high wind blowing from the opposite direction.

Many, he declared, were seasick. The accident happened so swiftly that only one or two had time to seize lifebelts and leap overboard. Many of the women on board had babies in arms.

Another survivor, the Norwegian, owed his life to long experience with menacing seas. As a precaution he had put on a lifebelt as soon as the storm came up.

He said that the steamer was about ten miles from port when the sudden hurricane blew up.

Albert Berth, another survivor, said that the vessel sank at exactly six thirty o'clock. He pointed to his watch, which had stopped exactly at that time. On the Saint Philbert with him had been his mother who was among the victims.

"The wind had been blowing hard all day," he said. "As we approached Chateaufort Bank, where the water is shallow, the waves grew so fierce that passengers who could not find shelter in the cabins went over to the lee-side I remained on the other side with my mother, whom I never saw again."

"We were just remarking that we should soon be within the shelter of the Loire when we felt the boat keel over under the weight of the passengers who had gone to the other side and because of the wind and waves."

"At that instant an enormous wave struck us. The side of the vessel thundered like a huge drum. The ship turned completely over. I don't know how I escaped. I was dragged deep into the water but being on the top side of the vessel had more chance to come up than the others."

At an organization meeting yesterday near Dillonvale, leaders announced that the National Miners' Union would establish headquarters at Bridgeport, O. The National Miners' Union was organized to supplant the United Mine Workers of America.

The Dillonvale meeting was addressed by Will Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union league, an organization opposed to the American Federation of Labor. Foster criticized John D. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, asserting that he had betrayed the miners in previous strikes.

He also denounced Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania and Governor George White for what he declared were efforts to re-establish the United Mine Workers.

A Tribute to

WALTER MONROE PLEUKHARP

WHO WAS SHOT JUNE 2, 1931

Pleukie's cheerful face is absent. His hunting coat hangs by the door.

For the bandit's shots were fatal—Coat and crutch he'll need no more.

In the calm and peaceful tenor Of the happy village small Came disaster swift and deadly That is sure to reach us all.

"Stick 'em up!" the bandit ordered, And faced Pleukie eye to eye. But Old Pleukie's glance was deadly. For he meant that one should die.

And to draw his gun he hastened. That was his thought—only once. But before his act was finished All the damage had been done.

Now the kids will miss his pennies. Candy, corns bananas too. And they'll miss the many truck rides That he seemed to think their die.

Pleukie's store has closed its portals. All the town is tearful-eyed. How they'll miss the bench at Pleukie's. Since their old friend Pleukie died.

In each family all around him. He a member had become, And they mourned his fateful leaving. As a loved one from their home.

Who'll advise us in our troubles? Where to put our savings small? Who will sell us bread and sugar—Anything for which we'd call?

And the roads the schools, the churches, Won't they miss his bounteous gift? For in all their many troubles Pleukie never failed to lift.

Dear Old Pleukie died a martyr. To the good things he foresaw: And the deed that caused his death wound Was his aim to uphold law.

But he's gone we can't recall him: None can ever take his place: And we know he's found contentment—He has earned it by his race.

Pleukie's cheerful face is absent. His hunting coat hangs by the door.

For the bandit's shots were fatal—Coat and crutch he'll need no more.

Fred Stenmetz, of Lancaster, the driver of the other car, his wife, Lucy Stenmetz, and Johnson's wife all were injured.

A Hamilton man, Frank F. Brunner, died in a physician's office, in Cincinnati, after his car skidded off the highway near Mt. Healthy and overturned. Robert Herzog, 21, and John Connaughton, 22, also of Hamilton, were seriously injured.

Ten-year-old John Gross was struck by lightning while walking in Edgewater park in Cleveland, with a sister, who was not injured. He sought refuge from the storm under a tree.

A 75-year-old man was accused of the stabbing of Adam Raag, 26, who was killed during a scuffle at Hamilton. Police held William Reed, grandfather of a youth with whom Raag had been fighting, for investigation.

Enraged because, he said, he had been "double crossed" about his room and board, Herbert Fry, 67, shot and killed Mrs. Ella Rose Solley Martin, 34, his landlady, at Cincinnati, according to police.

During a fight with a woman at her home, Frank Mitchell, 28, Columbus negro, was stabbed with a long knife and died. The woman said she tried to protect herself after she had been knocked down three times.

Owen Hall, 33, son of the former city manager of Gallipolis, was shot in the back at Crown City, on the Ohio river road, in a mysterious slaying. Authorities held Hazel Dillon, 17, and Bethel Moore, 24, who, it was said, were with Hall when he was shot.

CAMPERS PLAY PRANK ON J. D.

A number of out of doors enthusiasts including J. D. Hummel, R. L. Brehmer, C. O. Leist, William Teegardin and S. G. Rader, enjoyed a day at Rader's camp near Pikeston last week. It is only natural to assume that a party such as his would enjoy the trip, with good home cooked food—for they are all good cooks—and the visit wouldn't be complete with someone being caught off guard, with some prank being played on them. All of these men know how to handle a gun, but all of them don't know the difference between a Ground Hog and a plaster Paris door stop, so John Hummel, being an expert marksman, sat in wait for the ground Hog and when this door stop showed his head in the hole, bang, and the prize was won, but the laugh was on John. He'll be his own guide the next time.

478 DROWNED

Many, he declared, were seasick. The accident happened so swiftly that only one or two had time to seize lifebelts and leap overboard. Many of the women on board had babies in arms.

Another survivor, the Norwegian, owed his life to long experience with menacing seas. As a precaution he had put on a lifebelt as soon as the storm came up.

He said that the steamer was about ten miles from port when the sudden hurricane blew up.

Albert Berthy, another survivor, said that the vessel sank at exactly six thirty o'clock. He pointed to his watch, which had stopped exactly at that time. On the Saint Philbert with him had been his mother who was among the victims.

"The wind had been blowing hard all day," he said. "As we approached Chatelier Bank, where the water is shallow, the waves grew so fierce that passengers who could not find shelter in the cabins went over to the lee-side. I remained on the other side with my mother, whom I never saw again."

"We were just remarking that we should soon be within the shelter of the Loire when we felt the boat keel over under the weight of the passengers who had gone to the other side and because of the wind and waves."

"At that instant an enormous wave struck us. The side of the vessel thundered like a huge drum. The ship turned completely over. I don't know how I escaped. I was dragged deep into the water but being on the top side of the vessel had more chance to come up than the others."

The Dillonvale meeting was addressed by Will Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Unity league, an organization opposed to the American Federation of Labor. Foster criticized John D. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, asserting that he had betrayed the miners in previous strikes.

He also denounced Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania and Governor George White, for what he declared were efforts to re-establish the United Mine Workers.

WALTER MONROE PLEUKHARP

WHO WAS SHOT JUNE 2, 1931

Pleukie's cheerful face is absent. His hunting coat hangs by the door.

For the bandit's shots were fatal—Coat and crutch he'll need no more.

In the calm and peaceful tenor Of the happy village small Came disaster swift and deadly That is sure to reach us all.

"Stick 'em up!" the bandit ordered, And faced Pleukie, eye to eye; But Old Pleukie's glance was deadly, For he meant that one should die.

And to draw his gun he hastened, That was his thought—only one; But before his act was finished, All the damage had been done.

Now the kids will miss his pennies, Candy, cones, bananas, too; And they'll miss the many truck rides That he seemed to think their due.

Pleukie's store has closed its portals, All the town is tearful-eyed; How they'll miss the bench at Pleukie's Since their old friend Pleukie died!
